Dear Mr. Lewis

I fear you will find us a very troublesome "family" always wanting something!

1. The accountants have just

3. Are we at liberty to order anything immediately yes necessary for the upkeep of the house.

4. Shall I bank cheques into an Executor's yes, account? So far I have not banked any.

Must see you tomorrow
yes. Right before or after class as suits you best.

Dear Mr. Lewis

We are paying in a number of cheques today & went back Mr. Bell if I should start new bank paying in books the said 'no' to on with the same!

I told him how sending all sent copies of the bill to the Trustees.

for the exporters' accounts except a few made out to their names which would probably have to go back to the senders for attestation. Mr. Bell said this was what all necessary that it was quite legal for merchants to Per Pro as I have always done.

I have therefore done this & hope this note may be in time to save further enquiry in the present. Mr. N. McQueen writes this morning that he has

Dear Mr. Lewis,

The late Miss Mason's Estate.

Thanks for your letter of yesterday's date.

I think the valuation had better be taken in hand at once. If Mr. Stalher can do both the real estate and the furniture, etc., I think it would be better. Would it be troubling you to see him and find out if both valuations are in his line? If you are satisfied and he is willing to act, I will then write him a formal letter of instruction which he perhaps would prefer to have.

Yours sincerely,

H. McQueen.

Dear Mr. Lewis,

Miss Mason's Estate.

I have written instructing Mr. Stalker to value Miss Mason's effects. I gather from your letter that it is not quite in his line to value freehold property as freehold and that we must ask somebody else to do this. Who do you suggest should do this?

With regard to the question of dilapidations; do you really think we should have a report on these, as it would mean an additional expense, and seems to me to be a matter for the Trustees as a body rather than the Executors?

Yours sincerely,

N. McQueen.

Dear Mr. Lewis,

If you agree I have asked Miss Kitching to put in the March Review an abstract of the will, leaving out personal legacies, etc. I think it will tend to give people a feeling of certainty and continuance and it is well ~~right~~ that the world should know of the wonderful provisions made by our dear friend for the right continuance of the work.

However, if you do not think it wise to do this, will you please tell Miss Kitching and she will omit it.

Yours sincerely,

H. Franklin
